

Use of Standard Vocabulary in Daily Communication

Hurein Misdach

University of Delft

Abstract

This study investigates the widespread use of standard vocabulary in everyday communication. It examines the prevalence of standardized language in various linguistic contexts and explores the reasons behind its adoption in daily discourse. Drawing on sociolinguistic theories and empirical data, this research sheds light on how standard vocabulary shapes interactions, influences language attitudes, and contributes to linguistic homogenization. The study also discusses the potential impact of using standardized language on social identity, inclusivity, and linguistic diversity. By providing insights into the dynamics of standard vocabulary in daily communication, this research contributes to a deeper understanding of language standardization processes and their implications in contemporary society.

Keywords: Vocabulary, Standart, Use, Daily